Wife Worked Nights Never Missed Hubby

CHICAGO (AP)—The body of Carmene Coccorullo, 63, who collapsed and died on a South Side street Tuesday, was identified Sunday by his wife, Glorida, 57. Mrs. Coccorullo said her husband had worked nights and she works days, so she had not missed him earlier.

Patient Police Get Loot Back

More than a year of patient investigation paid off for Saanich detectives and Sidney RCMP during the weekend when they recovered about $3,000 worth of loot from burglaries committed 13 months ago.

Following search of four houses in Victoria and Saanich, the recovered property began to pile up in Saanich police headquarters at Royal Oak. Police said they were seeking several individuals.

Bulk of the items recovered were identified as having been stolen from the home of R. W. Craig, of 2510 Sinclair, which was entered Dec. 21, 1957, while the occupants were out of town.

The house was almost stripped of belongings.

Rest of the articles are believed to be from similar thefts in the Sidney area at about the same time. Value of goods taken from the Craig house was estimated at $5,000, police said.

Among the recovered articles piling up at Royal Oak were a TV set, silverware, jewelry, cameras and accessories, dishes, radios, clocks, a sewing machine, typewriter, bedding, carpets and items of clothing ranging from lingerie to coats and dresses, with a value as high as $300.

Working on the case were Det. Sgt. Joseph Armstrong and Det. Robin Stewart of Saanich, Detectives William Andrews and Deans Blackstock of Victoria, and Sidney RCMP.
